

That the FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. We no longer receive the 3-5 calls a week from sales people (usually at dinner time).
We should not have to be targets for every sales and charity that wants to harrass us at home just because we have a phone.
Indiana's law has been very effective at preventing such harrassment. We pay for the phone and it is for our use.
We did not get it so that we would be targets for harrassment.
Only a fool would buy something over the phone when solicited by a stranger. Indiana's law has been a blessing. I only wish it were stronger by way of blocking calls from charities (or supposed charities). Some are honest, some crooked and most give 90% of the money they take in to the suppliers of the phones, calling lists and computers. Please, don't water down our law in order to benefit those we should not be accepting, let alone desiring calls from.
